

GESELLSCHAFT DEUTSCHER CHEMIKER

The Klaus Grohe Foundation – a foundation whose assets are held in trust and managed by the German Chemical Society (GDCh) – is inviting applications for its newly established

Klaus Grohe Promotion Award for Medicinal Chemistry 2026

The Award

The Klaus Grohe Promotion Award for Medicinal Chemistry has been established to promote early-career researchers at European research institutions. The award money amounts 25,000 euros and can only be used for research purposes, particularly to fund personnel resources.

Who is eligible for funding?

Funding can be provided to early career scientists who currently head an independent research group or who have taken up a W2 professorship in Germany or an equivalent position in Europe less than 12 months ago. To be eligible for consideration, nominees must conduct research in the fields of medicinal chemistry or drug research.

Nomination

Applications for the Klaus Grohe Promotion Award 2026 should be submitted to the GDCh head office by March 31, 2026. Please include a short covering letter, your CV, a list of your five most important publications and a three-page description of your proposed research project. Please submit your application via our online form at gdch.app/awards.
